At WEC, we do not utilize the disciplinary policy that the regular schools do. Since we have adults in our program as well as youth, our program is conducted as an adult environment. We expect our students to conduct themselves as adults in their attitudes, their work habits, their attendance, and their behavior.

We have found that when our students realize that their education is in their hands, they tend to make better decisions regarding it. Having a much smaller student body and student-teacher ratio, we are able to facilitate a closer relationship with our students.

Seldom do we have a problem. However, whenever we do have a student who is not exhibiting those adult traits, we meet with that student to discuss the issue. If it is felt necessary to administer a consequence, we do so.

WEC instills a sense of family among our students and staff. If there is a disagreement, it is resolved as adults would resolve it. Mutual respect is a staple in our program. In 15 years, we have had only one altercation. We do not have writing on our walls, desks, etc...This building is treated as our home.

Our classroom is considered a learning environment, and that no one has a right to disrupt it. Students understand and respect that.

We do not have many guidelines for our program, but our students understand that the guidelines we have in place are designed to help them be more successful at WEC.

Our students are allotted a certain number of unexcused absences and tardies. They are expected to treat this program as a job. They are required to clock in every morning. If they are not going to be in attendance, only the student is to call in. If the student does not call, I call them.

Our students are considered to be at-risk; they typically have more obstacles than their counterparts in the regular school to overcome in order to be successful in school and in life. By offering them a caring, supportive, respectful environment, the majority of them thrive.

WEC is an alternative school; we must use alternative methods of dealing with our students.
